Appomattox County Library

By Verna Conner

For thirty years Corrie ten Boom has traveled the globe to be what she calls a "Tramp for the Lord". If you read "The Hiding Place" you already know what this wonderful woman of eighty - plus years has done to let the world know what the Lord has done for her and how she feels that her life was spared in order that she might spread the gospel throughout the world.

In this sequel to her first book she tells how she met her former prison guard and how hard it was to forgive him but through prayer she not only forgave him but brought him to Christ.

This book is not yet in your library but will probably be there soon so watch for it.

Another book which I enjoyed very much is entitled The Lynmara Legacy and this one if now in the library along with others which I shall mention later. It is by Catherine Gaskin and is a romantic family saga telling of the lives of several generations of England's greatest, during World War II. If you liked the books by R. F. Delderfield you will like this one. It also reminds me of the Forsyte Saga by Galsworthy.

The patriots, edited by Virginius Dabney with an introductory essay by Henry Steele Commager is a dream come true to history students. It is a new look at fifty of the leading patriots of the American Revolution and each commentary is by a different writer. It has portraits - - some in color - - of the fifty men and women - - most of them made from life. This book as Mr. Dabney states in his introduction, makes us aware that we are "the beneficiaries of an unparalleled generation of genius."

In the foreword Mr. Dabney says that the omission of certain popular heroes and heroines will be noticed. Among these are Paul Revere, Betsy Ross and Molly Pitcher. He said Revere, though an ardent patriot was of little or no importance to the cause as he was captured by the British before he got to Concord. In speaking of Betsy Ross, he says there is no direct evidence that she either designed or sewed the first Stars and Stripes. And though Molly Pitcher did bring water to the soldiers, it does not qualify her to be placed among the fifty patriots.

You may not want to read all of this book but it is worth a trip to the library just to look at the pictures and read parts of it. Men such as these, with integrity and love of country, are sorely needed in America today.
